PCs SHRED LIBERAL BROKEN PROMISES

Last Throne Speech proved you can't believe anything Dalton McGuinty says

(Queen's Park) – Today, Progressive Conservative critics, Tim Hudak and John Yakabuski literally shredded whatever was left of Dalton McGuinty's credibility.

“Next week's Throne Speech can be filed under fiction at your local library, because you just can't believe a thing Dalton McGuinty says,” said Hudak. “Dalton McGuinty cynically promised everything to everybody during the last campaign and then, once elected, cynically went about breaking those promises one by one. Dalton McGuinty is afraid to make tough decisions, and he won't tell you the truth.”

Hudak and Yakabuski dissected the 2003 Speech From the Throne and Liberal platform. As broken promise after broken promise was read aloud, the members slowly fed the former Throne Speech and platform into a paper shredder, casting them as worthless and totally abandoned by the Premier entrusted to actually live up to their content.

“Ontarians will not be fooled this time around. Dalton McGuinty's last Throne Speech was full of promises that were never kept,” said Yakabuski. “Ontarians do not need another vacuous Throne Speech full of empty rhetoric. Our province is falling behind on the big files like energy, healthcare and the economy and a Throne Speech is not going to make up for the extra $2000 a year that Dalton McGuinty has taken out of the pockets of the average Ontario family in the past two years.”
